

Adam Bulandra participated at the International Leadership Conference with the contribution titled "Equality in education as potential for social participation". In his presentation he described the most contemporary discourse in reference to equality education and revealed how its principles are implemented in Poland. he drew certain assumptions whether such education leads to enhancement of social participation of those who are educating and those who are learning. This type of education was compared with diversity management practices and intercultural teaching to identify the common ground and significant differences. Finally, he presented the outcomes of two Horizon 2020 project dedicated to whole child approach practices that might be considered as essential part of equality education. One of the projects was MiCREATE.